Purchase saves park from development

Brothers soak up a little calm after storm

When the sun finally broke through Wednesday after a wild week of weather, Arron and Cody Meddles practice the art of a little brotherly love on the village streets. Arron, 4, and Cody, 3, live in Carmel and were on an outing with their mom. For more on the storm that pounded the Peninsula, see pages 6 and 14.

Mission Trail parcel acquired by BSLT

By PAUL WOLF

A SWIFT private fund-raising effort has led to the preservation of roughly half an acre of forest in Carmel's Mission Trail Park.

Within the 11th Avenue entrance to the park, two ridgeside lots just off the main trail have been spared from development as a result of a Big Sur Land Trust acquisition.

Escrow closed Feb. 15 on the land trust's $325,000 purchase of the Probasco property. The nonprofit chipped in $35,000 and, within the span of about six months, secured private donations for the $290,000 balance.

"These donations came from a small number of donors who live in the area," said Brian Steen, the land trust's executive director. "This is an exceptional example of local people taking charge of their future."

In addition to serving the interests of open space, the purchase of the 18,531-square-foot lot takes a major burden off the city's shoulders.

For starters, the city last year was sued by property owner William Probasco over a requirement for an environmental impact report on his proposed house. Probasco has informed the land trust he would drop the lawsuit, according to Steen.

In addition, the city has been under pressure to buy the property, but has lacked the means. The city's Open Space Task Force has identified the property as worth preserving but has focused its attention on other potential acquisitions, such as the half dozen lots in Pescadero Canyon.

Appeal of Pressley cottage rebuild taken to council

By PAUL WOLF

THESE DAYS, when the issue is Pescadero Canyon in Carmel, even routine decisions can assume a high profile.

The rebuilding plan for a canyon cottage crushed by a tree during the storm last March is slated for Carmel City Council action March 5.

The plan comes to the council via an appeal of a Feb. 14 planning commission decision, which denied a proposed increase of square footage from the original 392 to 1,415.

Property owner Norm Pressley filed an appeal last Friday rather than reduce the size of the project.

Located on the north side of Second Avenue between Lopez and Camino Real, the property sits next to six vacant, lushly forested lots that the city for years has hoped to preserve as open space.

"The council, I hope, will look at the project more logically, less rigidly," said project designer John Mandurrago, leveling criticism at the commission 6-1 vote, in which Chairman Carl Livingston dissented.

As the March 1995 storm brought more flooding and property damage along the Carmel River, wind was the only problem within the village.

Shoplifters pick on wrong guy

ONLY ONE conclusion will do: Those shoplifters picked on the wrong guy.

Larry Frantz wasn't buying into their sleazy game.

That's the 43-year-old manager of Old World Antiques on Dolores between Ocean and Seventh in Carmel.

Using common sense, experience and good instincts, he fashioned the textbook response to would-be marauders like James Satterfield, 43, Salinas, and Jeffrey Oldham, 31, Monterey, identified by police as the ones who took a $500 hand-painted French urn away from the store without bothering to pay.

Citizen's group aids ambulance stance

By JOHN DETRO

USING A new, citizen-based advisory group as the tool, Carmel has sharpened its focus on the ambulance service issue, City Administrator Jere Kersnar said Wednesday.

Formed by Kersnar at the city council's request and having met twice already, the special unit will investigate "how Carmel can keep the excellent ambulance service that we now have," he said. "The preservation of that service is what this (committee) is all about."

That goal represented the increasingly tighter focus. When Mayor Ken White talked about the committee and current Carmel Regional Fire Ambulance services

■ Committee puts sharp focus on 'preservation of service.'

after the Jan. 22 council session, he said the group would "look at all the ambulance options and then report back through Jere to the council."

At that same meeting, council members approved a $30,000 subsidy so that CRFA service could be provided through June 30. County supervisors late last year told cities that only one ambulance service — Peninsula Paramedics — would serve the entire county.

The county's single-provider plan would necessitate the removal of an ambulance from the downtown Carmel fire station. "... Carmel is declaring war against the county," White said on Jan. 24.

No conflict exists, the mayor said Wednesday, between his earlier take on the committee and Kersnar's first media statements about that group.

More information

"It is correct to say that our focus is sharper and tougher," White added. "That's because we have more information today than we had before. We've always said we wanted the better service — and, to my mind, that has always been CRFA."

The first two committee meetings, Kersnar said, have been devoted to provid-

Candidates strive for nonpolitical public service

By PAUL WOLF

TOWARD THE end of a three-hour forum that included 19 candidates in four legislative races, an obscure State Senate contender may have offered the best summation.

One after another Saturday morning at Seaside's Oldmeyer Center, candidates in four regional races boasted of their refusal to accept political action committee (PAC) money or intention to limit such contributions.

Then Scott Hartley of the Natural Law

Party chimed in: "I am accepting no money at all. The media is perfectly able to cover this campaign as I am perfectly able to speak."

It would be difficult to take a more populist stance than that. Hartley took the theme of the morning — nonpolitical public service — to its extreme: All contributions are unacceptable, even, as Hartley suggested, money candidates invest in their own campaigns.

Sponsored by the American Association of Retired Persons, Saturday's event was too candidate-heavy to allow for actual debates with person-to-person confrontations. Instead, it was more of a get-acquainted session. Often, it appeared everybody was seeking to be an Everyman.

On the surface, the goal was to court the vote of seniors, who populated the audience of about 100 in greatest proportion. The real challenge was to fit in with the current ideal candidate profile: Down-to-earth, unsullied by politics, uncorrupted by special interests.

Still, as candidates want to reform taxes, campaign financing and health care, it is rarely at the risk of controversy. With so many grouped in one room, many latched onto the same message as the way to stand out.

"I am not a politician or a bureaucrat," declared Republican congressional candidate Phillip Chavez, who lives in Salinas. "I am nobody's puppet. I am just a local father trying to do something for his community."

Traditional party stances were blurred. Assemblyman Bruce McPherson, a Republican candidate for State Senate,

What's wrong and Right with TV today

THANKS to Jolayne Sanders of Monterey, we have before us today a 36-page "Family Guide to Prime Time Television" to help us chaperone our families through the minefield that IS prime time TV.

Costing $9.95, this booklet is put out by the Parents' Television Council, an arm of the right wing Media Research Center in Alexandria, Va., which was set up in 1987 to document "liberal bias" in news and entertainment.

IT rates each program with a green light, a yellow light or a red light.

A Green Light rating means you don't have to cover your children's eyes and ears (or your spouse's, either) because that show is "family friendly" with "traditional values."

("Traditional values" has come to mean you must vote Republican; you detest all foreigners, especially immigrants; the homeless should be deported; so should homosexuals; all members of your family, including toddlers, own guns; and you go to church every Sunday to remind God what a good Christian you are!)

A Yellow Light means the show contains adult-oriented themes which "may be inappropriate" for your nippers.

And a Red Light means hide the wife and kids in the storm cellar because this baby is apt to mention SEX!

Anyway, here are some excerpts from the booklet to help you revise your family's viewing habits to ensure you won't be left defenseless until you're able to buy your own personal copy —

RED Lights:

■ Friends — "Discusses sex virtually every week ... The show has also endorsed lesbian parenting."

■ Murphy Brown — "Dialogue has slammed the religious and criticized proponents of family values." (Dan Quayle?)

■ NYPD Blue — "Rough language and occasional dorsal nudity make the show unsuitable for family viewing ..." (Dorsal nudity? Does this mean tuna fish without dressing? Come on, I need help here.)

■ Seinfeld — "Sex is the show's favorite subject matter ..."

■ Beverly Hills 90210 — "Main characters regularly engage in premarital sex, and have yet to face any negative consequences ... The brightest note — a regular who vows to remain a virgin until her wedding night."

■ Roseanne — "It has showcased foul language, condoned premarital sex ... and addressed adult-oriented subject matter such as homosexuality."

YELLOW Lights:

■ Frasier — "Humor is sophisticated ... and not rooted in vulgarity. A minus — one woman character is unashamedly promiscuous."

■ ER — "Pre- and extra-marital sex is fairly frequent ... and the surgery scenes are often quite graphic."

■ Bless This House — "Replete with smart-alec children and a promiscuous supporting character."

■ Hope & Gloria — "Not especially offensive, although Gloria has referred to past promiscuity, and a main character's homosexuality is portrayed matter-of-factly." (Instead of stoning him to death?)

■ The Simpsons — "While Homer, the father, is portrayed as a bumbling oaf, the loyal and loving matriarch balances out the cartoon's portrayal of parenthood."

GREEN Lights:

■ Touched By an Angel — "One of brightest spots in prime time, and every episode talks about God and His love."

■ Fresh Prince of Bel-Air — "A pro-family series, (it) champions the work ethic, chastity, and individual responsibility."

Rancho San Carlos foes pave way for possible county ballot measure

By PAUL WOLF

IF PROJECT opponents have their way, the citizens of Monterey County will have the final word on Rancho San Carlos.

In feverish fashion and throughout the county, opponents are gathering signatures for a referendum on the 32-square-mile development, which county supervisors approved Feb. 6.

Project opponents say they are well on their way toward securing the needed 9,200 valid signatures — 10 percent of the last gubernatorial election turnout — by the March 7 deadline.

"There has been an overwhelming response in the street despite the adverse conditions," said project foe Holly Keifer, who endured heavy rains Tuesday morning as she sought sympathetic passers-by in front of the Carmel-by-the-Sea Post Office.

"We need to disseminate very little information," Keifer added. "It seems everybody knows exactly what they are signing. People know that development in this area has gone beyond our ability to mitigate it."

The 20,000 acre ranch is located immediately south of Carmel Valley. The approved plan allows for construction of 350 residential units, 150 hotel rooms, an 18-hole golf course, a clubhouse and other facilities. It also leaves about 90 percent of the acreage undeveloped and protected as habitat lands under the aegis of the Santa Lucia Preserve.

Two sides

Project supporters, including the Rancho San Carlos team itself, say the project accommodates property rights while setting aside most of the land for wildlife. Opponents say that by scattering development fairly evenly across the ranch, the project more closely resembles a subdivision than a preserve.

The petition effort stands as a hindrance to the development team.

"To be held up until there is an election would be unfortunate, not just for the project but for all the people who have expressed enthusiasm for it," said Brian Finegan, the attorney representing the Rancho San Carlos Partnership.

Although he believes there is a strong base of support for the project in the areas most affected by it, Finegan would not predict how the county as a whole would vote.

"What concerns me," said Jeffrey Froke, president of the Santa Lucia Conservancy, "is misinformation. All the credible scientists who know the land are with us. There is a feeling, 'How can a developer design a preserve?' I still respect the process. I am confident if this were put to a vote, we would end where we are now — that is, with an approved project."

"This is being challenged by people who know very lit-

Sheriff's Log

NEIGHBORS CARE about neighbors. So here's a rundown on activity logged by Monterey County Sheriff's Department from Monday, Feb. 12, through Sunday, Feb. 18.

Note — Items from "Carmel" refer to the sheriff's jurisdiction; deputies do not handle calls within the city limits of Carmel-by-the-Sea.

MONDAY, FEB. 12

Carmel: A woman reported getting numerous phone calls from a bank attempting to contact a subject not known to her. "Bank was contacted and said her telephone number would be removed from the automated dialer."

Carmel: A woman reported that her side gate was open when she returned home from work. She was sure she closed it. "Nothing disturbed; nothing missing."

Carmel: A man reported that the rear plate was removed from his vehicle while it was parked near a restaurant in a shopping center. "No suspects."

Carmel: A man reported a subject caught in the surf just off Carmel Beach. "The dive team was paged and canceled when the subject made it out of the water."

Carmel Valley: A woman reported hearing noises outside her home. "She said it could have been her cat; officers conducted an area check and found nothing suspicious."

Pebble Beach: A woman said her soon-to-be ex-husband took a vehicle that had belonged to her late father. "She is handling the estate, and had told him not to take the truck. He has been using it over the past three years."

Big Sur: A man reported being assaulted by his neighbor. He said his truck was damaged by the same person.

TUESDAY, FEB. 13

No items were forwarded for publication.

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 14

Carmel: A man said he had $19,000 or more embezzled from him last October by a business associate. "He was supposed to be a limited partner in a real estate deal. The partnership never existed."

Carmel: A man made a $5 purchase in a bookstore. The $100 traveler's check with which he paid turned out to be counterfeit.

Carmel: Within the last three weeks, someone stole a Coleman 5000 16-amp generator out of a tent.

Carmel Valley: A woman reported having an argument with her son — "who refusing to enter a drug rehab program."

THURSDAY, FEB. 15

Carmel: During a phone call to his mother in Mill Valley, a troubled young man told her that he had been to Carmel Mission — and that he was going to take his own life. He was said to be driving the truck of a friend.

Carmel Valley: A church spokesperson requested that a man be removed from the place, where a public forum was being held. "The man was trying to get signatures for the Rancho San Carlos referendum, and the church spokesman didn't think that activity was appropriate. The man left of his own accord."

Carmel Highlands: A man reported "two unknown male subjects with flashlights peeping through his bedroom window — subjects took off on foot toward an inn." Area check made; no one found.

FRIDAY, FEB. 16

Carmel Valley: A woman reported that she and her boyfriend had gotten into an argument after returning from an evening out. "She appeared to be very intoxicated; her statement was inconsistent." The man was gone when officers arrived.

Carmel Valley: Officers contacted the recipient of an annoying phone call. "The caller spoke to the victim and read an alleged Western Union telegram. Victim is in the process of a divorce, and believes her soon-to-be ex-husband may have been involved." She wished documentation of the call.

SATURDAY, FEB. 17

Carmel: Supermarket manager reports getting some complaints about the actions of petition circulators in front of the store.

Carmel Valley: A man described himself as being involved in the protest against the Rancho San Carlos Development. He reported his fear of the ranch foreman. "He described the other man's actions as watching him in public places and distributing opposing pamphlets. The foreman has not threatened or otherwise interfered with the reporting party's efforts."

Carmel Valley: A man reported four of his garden hoses slashed over the past two days. "No suspect leads."

Pebble Beach: "A woman reported that someone had stolen her handmade mail box valued at $100. Occurred some time during the dark hours."

Big Sur: A man reported that someone entered his house during the last three weeks by unknown means and took two handguns. "Other valuable items were not taken. No suspects."

SUNDAY, JAN. 18

Carmel: Officer was approached by people saying their shop in a center had suffered a robbery attempt the day before. The officer spoke with employees over the phone and determined there was no attempted robbery."

Carmel: A woman said she was having tle about this land," added General Manager Tom Gray. "I think their objective is to limit growth at any cost ... These are people who should be supporting us. We are committed to protecting 29-square-feet of permanent open space."

According to Monterey County Registrar of Voters Tony Anchondo, the signatures would force the board of supervisors either to void its final approvals or take the matter to the people.

Considering the board's 5-0 action, it is unlikely supervisors would routinely overturn of its decision. Rancho San Carlos would be ballot-bound. If the board opts for a referendum, it probably would consider a consolidated ballot in November, rather than a special election before then, according to Anchondo.

For now, about three dozen petitioners are at work throughout the county, said project foe Noel Mapstead. Only a random portion of the total set of signatures will be validated, according to Anchondo.

Meanwhile, there is every indication that passions continue to be inflamed on the subject of Rancho San Carlos.

Project foes have informed The Pine Cone of numerous calls to the Sheriff's Department to complain of alleged harassment from the Rancho San Carlos camp. Also, Sheriff's log items in this newspaper confirm that at least two calls within the sheriff's domain indeed were made.

Sheriff's Lt. Dave Allard, however, said there have been no "reported crimes," such as battery, assault or threats of violence.

"We've found no violations of law," Allard said. "If someone can give me a specific time and place and a specific crime, then we will look into it."

problems with her landlord. "He removed her property from her room while her rent still was paid."

Carmel: The owner of a pizza house reported that his soon-to-be ex-wife was at their restaurant against a court order stipulating she is not to be there after 2:30 p.m.

CRA lauds Jean White as 1995 Citizen of the Year

Cited for 35 years of serving her community

By KENDALL KLYM

FROM TRAINING Red Cross volunteers to creating the city's official cultural and arts support group, Jean White has dedicated herself to community service in Carmel.

Honored Feb. 19 by the Carmel Residents Association as the 1995 Citizen of the Year, White, the wife of Mayor Ken White, received the customary engraved clock as well as certificates from Assemblyman Bruce McPherson, R-Santa Cruz, Fifth District Supervisor Sam Karas, Rep. Sam Farr, D-Carmel and Sen. Henry Mello, D-Watsonville.

"I felt very honored," she said. "Since we have been in Carmel, we have always given back to the community. We've lived here for 35 years."

White was chosen by a nominating committee made up of association members and other community residents. The committee opens and reads the letters of nomination as a group and then begins the elimination process. Possible candidates are discussed until a unanimous choice is reached.

Clayton Anderson, an association and committee member, said White has served the community faithfully and successfully since her arrival in 1961.

"All the time, whenever something was needed, she was always there," he said.

"All this time, she has been employed full time teaching school. She's a remarkable woman."

Safe in the Water

White's community achievements include training Red Cross volunteers in CPR, water safety, life guarding and first aid; serving as a founding member of the Friends of Sunset Foundation; serving on the Community and Cultural Commission for 14 years, three of which she served as chairwoman; and promoting culture and the arts throughout the community.

Her professional achievements include teaching physical education in Carmel and Monterey.

Approximately 125 people recognized White and her accomplishments during a dinner and ceremony at the Scout House in Carmel. Master of ceremonies Howard Skidmore said she was the obvious choice for 1995.

"Nobody has a qualification schedule like hers — all the way down to working for the Red Cross and the cultural scene," he said. "Obviously it came down to Jean."

Jean White

Continuing focus

Without taking much time to savor her moments in the limelight, White continues to focus her attention on the needs of the community.

"We're still trying to do some remodeling to make the (Sunset) Theater the best that it can be," she said. "The facility needs a lot of upgrading. It's like an old lady who needs a lot of tender loving care."

White was chosen out of nine citizens who were nominated. She considers the formation of the Friends of Sunset as one of her biggest achievements.

Last year's winner was Roy Thomas.

Past winners include Jim Wright, Joyce Stevens, Enid Sales, Jack Billwiller, Skip Lloyd, Noel Mapstead and Clayton Anderson.

Tooker: County kept Mission Fields in the dark during wild storm

By PAUL WOLF

THE POTENTIAL for yet a third flood disaster in Carmel's Mission Fields this week was greater than residents are likely ever to know through official channels.

So asserted Rick Tooker, a Carmel senior planner, Mission Fields Road resident and steady critic of flood management since his neighborhood was flooded in January and March of last year.

Tooker laments that the county and the neighborhood are still not communicating.

According to Tooker, the river reached a height of 10.9 feet at Carmel River Bridge — three feet from the danger level — at 10:30 Monday evening.

"We had absolutely no word from the county," he said. "We had only a 'small stream and urban flood advisory.' That means little when the river is rising a foot an hour at the bridge, as it was Monday evening."

Tooker and a handful of neighbors spent Monday night and early Tuesday monitoring river flow. A 1:30 a.m. reading revealed that the cresting level, thankfully, had dropped about an inch.

On Wednesday, Gene Taylor, senior hydrologist with the Monterey County Water Resources Agency, confirmed that the county noted "no reports of overflow" along the river. Also, he said, runoff and stream flow were well off danger levels.

For example, flow at Rosie's Bridge near Carmel Valley Village was 3,000 cubic feet per second, Taylor said. In March 1995, it reached 16,000 c.f.s.

(In the four-day period from March 8 through 11, rainfall in the upper watershed was nearly 13 inches. This week, the three days of continuous rain starting Monday yielded fewer than 5 inches, Taylor noted.)

Last year, Tooker chaired a fact-finding subcommittee under the aegis of the Carmel River Flood-Control Task Force, which studied inadequacies in the county's response and recommended changes.

"The county didn't think in January '95 that we had an impending disaster," Tooker retorted. "I'm not surprised they didn't think so this time."

Lance Monosoff, who lives at the lowest point of the river on Riverside Way, said the drainage pond on his property, used as a county public easement, was five inches away from overflowing.

He spent Monday evening securing his possessions and preparing for the worst. And Tooker took his work home with him Monday "to stay close by should there be a problem."

According to Tooker, a number of houses could have experienced at least some flooding had the pond overflowed.

Commissions will take close looks at Carpenter Project

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

THE PROPOSED Carpenter Street Improvement Project will be considered from different viewpoints during two separate commission meetings next week.

The Forest and Beach Commission will take up the item after its regular session starts at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday in the council chambers at Carmel City Hall.

And then planning commissioners will ponder selected aspects of it. That meeting is scheduled to begin at 4:30 p.m. Wednesday in the same chambers.

FOCUS ON COMMISSIONS

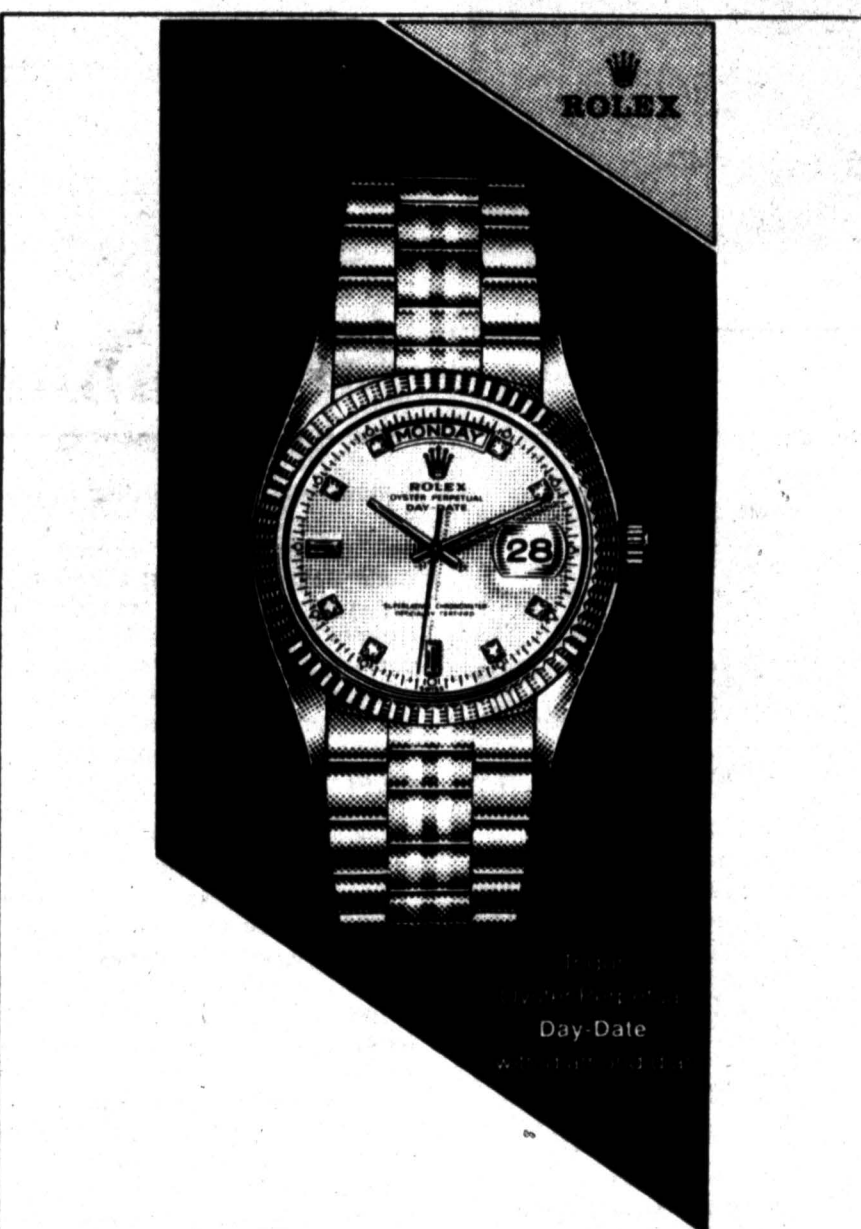

We will use a narrow scope, looking at only the opportunities to enhance the urban forest."

Pathway included

The project includes a pathway "from Ocean all the way to the bus stop in the Valley Way area," Ferlito said. She cited opportunities for adding plants and building safer crosswalks.

"We will not be considering," Ferlito added, "safety and traffic issues."

When planning commissioners view the same proposal, they will undertake a preliminary design review.

ing background — "getting up to speed on the issues." The unit plans to meet regularly.

White praised the committee's makeup.

"We had said all of Carmel's different (neighborhood and business) groups would be represented. Jere has achieved such a broad base — I'm really pleased."

Kersnar said he could not reveal members' names until he checked with them.

"They're doing me a favor — all six or eight of them," he said. "And they'll be giving advice to staff on ambulance matters. I owe them this courtesy."

White said he hopes that the citizens will study the problem of system financing. A county-wide parcel tax pays for emergency services; Carmel area fire districts say their contributions come to $100,000 per year. White said that — if the decision were his alone — he would sue the county to get back Carmel's $30,000. But that step must be made by city council as a whole, he stressed.

(Voters approved the formation of the taxation entity — County Service Area 74 — in 1988. The current levy is $11.90 per parcel.)

White, Kersnar and other area officials hope that the financial outlook will be clarified next month. The fire districts and Monterey County took a tangle of lawsuits before Superior Court Judge Richard Silver. He said last week that on March 15 he will rule on unresolved financial issues — the subsidies as well as attorneys' fees.

The county has challenged Silver's authority to distribute subsidies. All four fire districts will be represented by a brief from William Rose, attorney for the Carmel Valley Fire Protection District.

Zad Leavy, attorney for the CRFA, requested the March 15 hearing. That's the deadline for a decision on who will protect the Cachagua area.

Monterey County also claimed that the districts waived their rights of protest years ago by giving certain powers to the county. Silver ruled that he saw no evidence of such — so another hearing was scheduled on April 25.

Carmel Highlands man bailed out

By KENDALL KLYM

LAST YEAR, during the spring floods, Marshall Turner couldn't travel from Carmel Highlands to Carmel. The Carmel River took out the bridge between the two communities.

This year, on Tuesday, Turner couldn't even make it out of his driveway on the corner of Cypress Way and Fern Canyon Road. The calm trickle that skirts the edge of his home and travels beneath a section of his driveway turned into a raging rush of rainwater, rocks and mud. Most of the driveway became a waterway.

"I was afraid to go down the driveway," he said while two workers splashed around trying to fight off the floodwaters with the use of boulders. "I called the landlord, and he called the Granite Construction Company. They were here in 20 minutes."

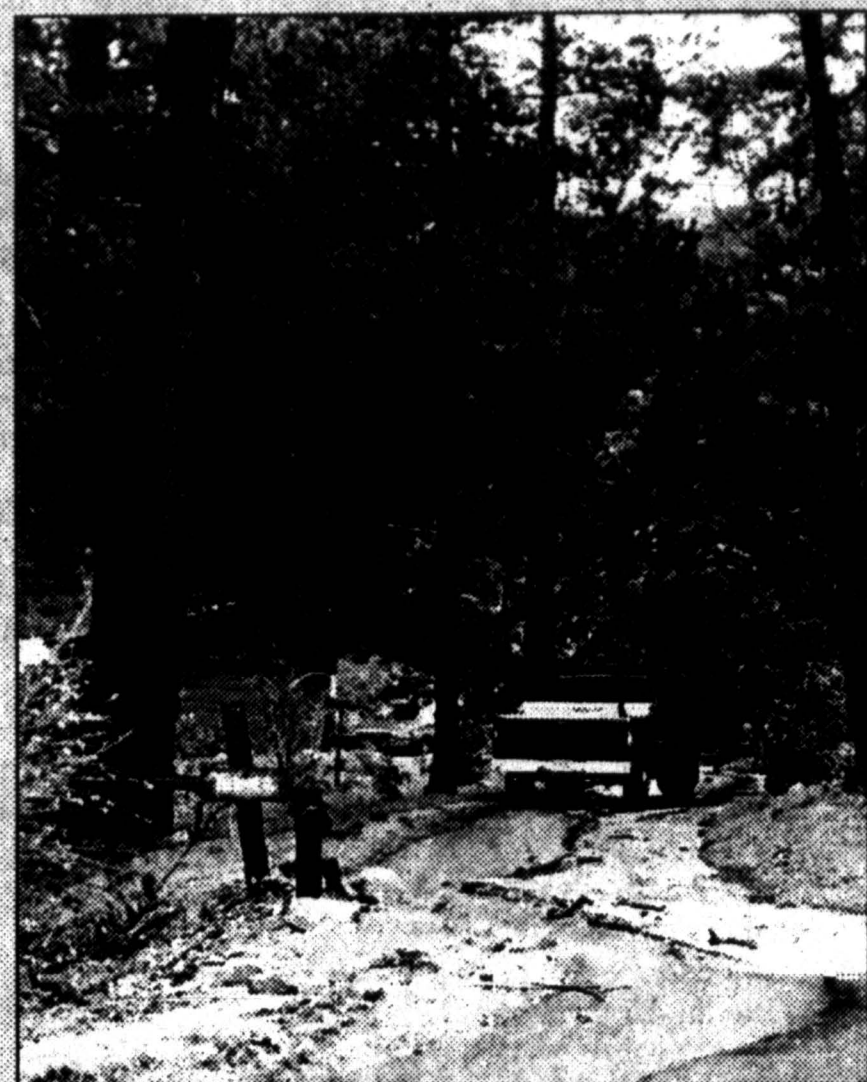

Mike De Armond and Ty Seeders of the Watsonville-based construction company worked from 9:30 a.m. to 12:15 p.m. trying to divert the rushing water.

"If you want to, you can drive through," De Armond said to Turner after putting the last boulder in place. "Go ahead before the mud gets hard and it will be difficult to get through."

Turner got into his car and started the engine.

De Armond said last year he participated in extensive clean-up projects after the floods.

"This is one of the first ones we've gotten this year," he said.

Like last year's storms, this week's rains made life miserable for Marshall Turner at his Carmel Highlands home.

tened by a fallen Monterey pine, was the only structure destroyed in Carmel proper. The tenant of the cottage was not injured.

In their defense

Defending the Feb. 14 decision, Commissioner Marshall Hydorn said the rebuilding plan clashed with an array of city zoning ordinances and standards.

Hydorn noted that the plan was constrained by the land's unusually steep 51 percent slope, which puts redevelopment in a more restrictive framework.

"We agreed the applicant (Pressley) has the right to rebuild, but not with the square footage that he was requesting," Hydorn said.

Commissioners also were concerned about approving a larger house at a time when the city is negotiating for the purchase of vacant canyon lots.

"Basing a decision on what is happening on other properties seems to me to be illegal and unethical," Mandurrigo argued. "His (Pressley's) application is completely separate and different."

Although the square footage would be greater, Mandurrigo said, the proposed two-level house shares roughly the same footprint as the original structure and does not constitute overdevelopment.

Meanwhile, Frank Wasko, who chairs the city's Open Space Task Force, said talks with canyon property owners have been favorable for purchase of the six undeveloped lots. The real problem, he added, is raising the money to buy the land.

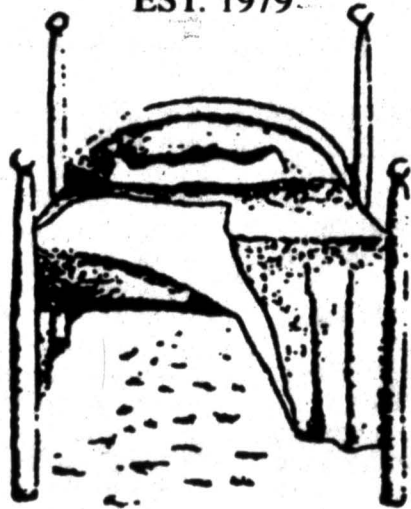

"Things are happening, but it's darn slow, very frustrating," Wasko said.

For years, the city council has expressed interest in preserving these lots, but has not had money to put toward that aim.

The city has secured a $100,000 matching grant from the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District and is in the running for a $250,000 grant from the California Department of Transportation, Wasko said.

He said informal estimates have placed a value for the six lots at roughly $1 million.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams
As Baby Boomers move into middle age, older Americans are setting records for longevity. Census Bureau data show that the number of people 85 or older increased by 230 percent since 1960, while the total population grew by only 30 percent. Longevity has reached the point where those who turned 65 in 1990 are expected to average 17 more years. More than 40,000 Americans now are 100 or older. Better health habits are credited in large part for the gains in life expectancy.

After finishing his freshman year in a Philadelphia high school in 1928, Howard Kenney left at 14 and got a job to help his family. He worked in a textile mill, rail-car factory, naval shipyard, as a street builder and bridge inspector. In 1963 he earned a GED, accepted as the equivalent of a high school education. A daughter felt that his life achievements rated a real diploma. So did administrators at his former high school. When he attended a grandson's graduation this year, Howard Kenney, age 82, was called forward to receive his own diploma.

Stevenson, Carmel gun for CCS hoop success

■ RLS: Boys, girls cap league season with wins.

By JOHN DAVI

AFTER A long and exciting regular season, both Robert Louis Stevenson varsity basketball teams finally get a chance this week to compete in the Central Coast Section playoffs.

The boys, 7-5 in the Mission Trail Athletic League and seeded No. 5 in CCS Division IV, travel to Bellarmine Prep in San Jose to take on Half Moon Bay at 1 p.m. Saturday.

The girls, No. 6 seed in Division IV, hope to continue play this weekend against Monte Vista (their first game, against Castilleja, was at home Wednesday night — after The Pine Cone press deadline). If they won, the Pirates would play at 4:30 p.m. Saturday against No. 3 seed Monte Vista Christian, 20-4.

The boys, who finished their season with a much-needed win over King City, remain confident and prepared for victory. Senior guard Alan Wang reflected the Pirates' high hopes for the tournament: "Even though our goal is to win state," he said, smiling, "we can't overlook anybody. We're taking it one game at a time."

On Monday night, Pirate starting guard Sean Jackson was named Most Valuable Player by a panel of MTAL coaches. Also, guard Michael Jackson was named to the all-defense team, while the ever-improving sophomore forward Shawn Cronin earned honorable mention status.

Rejuvenation

On the girls side, players are experiencing rejuvenation. A closing win last Friday over Alvarez sent the Pirates into this week's daily practice with high levels of hope and a nine-game winning streak.

"We've really stepped it up in practice," captain Gina Chappin said, "because we realize the season begins now. We've been working the past three months to get to this point."

"League games are the stepping stones to CCS."

■ CHS: Team finishes fast, blazes into playoffs.

By PATRICK FOU DY

FEW WOULD have expected that the Carmel High School varsity boys basketball team would finish the season as one of the most feared teams in the Mission Trail Athletic League.

After winning just two of their first six MTAL games, Carmel went 5-1 the second time around, finishing in a tie for fourth place with Robert Louis Stevenson School, considered as a legitimate title threat before the year began. The Padres' 7-5 MTAL mark was good enough to secure a spot in the Central Coast Section playoffs — and a seventh seed in Division IV play.

The post-season began Wednesday in a game that tipped off after Pine Cone deadline. Carmel, 11-12 overall, met up with No. 10 seed San Jose Academy, somewhat of an aberration in the playoffs as it took a less-than-playoff-like record of 4-17 record into the tilt at the CHS gym.

A Padre win would move them into the second round against No. 2 seed Pacific Grove at 4:30 p.m. Saturday at Alvarez High in Salinas. Carmel, under first-year head coach Gary Greeno, would thus face off against the same band of Breakers it defeated last Friday to finish the MTAL campaign on a winning note.

Gary Greeno

Locking up CCS berth

On Wednesday, Feb. 14, Carmel was able to secure a playoff berth with their 56-52 win over Palma. Tough defense down the stretch probably was the deciding factor.

Ryan Sanchez scored a game-high 21 points and Ben Cook had 11 to lead the Padres. Nick Cardinale knocked down eight, and Amir Masliyah had seven. CHS took advantage of the free throw line, going 30 for 36 while Palma was only 10 for 17.

After last Friday's game against Carmel, the last thing PG would want is a rematch this Saturday afternoon in the playoffs. It was perhaps the most exciting game of the MTAL season; Carmel came out ahead against their intense rivals — 53-51.

Sanchez scored 21 again, with his last two points being extremely important. The game was tied and less than a minute remained on the clock. Carmel worked the ball to Sanchez, who nailed a falling jumper inside the lane with only four seconds remaining.

CHS found inspiration early in the second quarter. Masliyah dove and tipped a pass down court to 6-4 junior Cook, who dunked it with authority to quiet the PG stands. Cook finished with 10 points.

Free throws were a factor again. Carmel hit eight of 10 down the stretch, while PG hit two for eight.

Taking on the world's toughest golf course

(Editor's Note: The Pine Cone is pleased to introduce new columnist Bill Hogan, who will be writing 'Hogan's Alley' every other week in the sports section. Bill's official debut came in The Pine Cone's Feb. 1 supplement for the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am.)

OVER THE Pali Highway from Honolulu, on the eastern base of the Koolau Mountains, lies the toughest golf course in the world: Koolau Golf Course.

With a slope rating of 162 from the championship tees (155 is usually the maximum), the course has been rated by the United States Golf Association as "the toughest golf course in the universe," according to Head Professional Parris Ernst. The legendary Pine Valley in New Jersey is sloped at "only" 152.

And you thought Spyglass Hill and Fort Ord Bayonet were tough!

Upon arrival at the Koolau pro shop, visitors are warned to play tees according to their skill level, and single digit handicappers "should not necessarily play the championship tees, and bring as many balls as your handicap." Even Scott Simpson, 1987 U.S. Open Champion, decided against playing the championship tees and he still shot an 80!

How tough can it get?

The course stretches to 7,310 yards of ravines, 220 yard forced carries, huge bunkers and the only bent grass greens on Oahu. If that's not enough of a challenge, the course lies in a virtual rain forest and the ground is always wet — so you don't get any roll!

The course was designed by Dick Nugent and Jack Tuthill, who set out to build a course for Japanese developers. Unfortunately, the Japanese private club market crashed, membership sales stopped, and the clubhouse sits vacant. Others say the reason it never succeeded as a club is that it's simply too tough to want to play on a regular basis.

The entire facility is currently for sale and the asking price is somewhere in the $85 million range. Who knows, maybe you could snag it for a cool $80 mil!

■ From The Clubhouse: I agree that it was a shame that David Eger of the PGA Tour canceled the AT&T. It could at least have been a 53-hole tournament. Whatever happened to those Monday makeup dates? As Bob Huntley of Carmel states: "David Eger blew it." ... Rick Kashfi, golf pro at Quail Lodge, caddied for Kevin Costner during the AT&T and Carmel's Andrew Whitacre looped for Bill Murray ... The 1996 PGA Merchandise Show was held recently in Orlando and established records of its own. More than 660,000 square feet of equipment, apparel and gimmicks were displayed for three days to some 70,000 buyers from around the world, a 30 percent increase over the previous year. The golf industry is obviously still growing, but when are people going to realize that it's the Indian, not the arrow ... Carmel's Clint Eastwood, who serves as chairman of the Monterey Peninsula Golf Foundation, was kind enough to donate his $2,000 in winnings at the AT&T Celebrity Shootout to the Carmel Youth Center ... R.J. Harper, director of golf at Pebble Beach Golf Links, was honored by the Northern California PGA as "1995 Junior Golf Leader" ... Looking for a great value? Sanchez, Masliyah, Cook receive MTAL accolades

RYAN SANCHEZ, star senior guard of the Carmel High School boys varsity basketball team, has been named Defensive Most Valuable Player by the Mission Trail Athletic League coaches.

In addition, CHS senior forward Amir Masliyah was named to the MTAL's all-defense team.

Carmel's third all-league representative was junior forward Ben Cook, an honorable mention selection.

3 CHS wrestlers enter CCS fray

By AMIR MASLIYAH

CARMEL HIGH wrestlers Toby Lauterbach, Russell Brunet and Jason Remyse are poised for Central Coast Section competition, beginning Friday in Santa Clara.

"My goal right now is to reach the second day," Remyse commented. Lauterbach and Brunet agree with the step-by-step approach, saying they're excited but know that the competition is always tough.

■ GIRLS BASKETBALL

After ending its season on a high note by defeating Pacific Grove 43-40, the CHS girls basketball squad already looks forward to next season.

"Though we're losing good players, we should do well with all of our returnees," sophomore Sadie Thomas predicted. Carmel hopes youth and renewed health will provide a strong 1996-97 season.

Last Friday, Carmel moved in the right direction, outscoring the Breakers 14-8 in the final period to clinch the win, spurred by six of Shannon Dougherty's game high 18 points.

The Padres put together a solid team effort. The combination of gritty defense and a patient offense buoyed the victory. Julie Lundy and frosh Michelle Gaudoin combined for 10 points.

Carmel ended at 5-11 in the Mission Trail Athletic League and 7-22 overall.

FORUM: 19 candidates make their pitch

boasted of being consistently pro-choice on abortion, while Robert Wigod, a Democrat running for Congress, argued in favor of a reduced capital gains tax.

Differences were found in emphasis. Here are some highlights in the three races that directly affect the Monterey Peninsula:

■ 17th Congressional District:

Because the outsider stance was one he cannot claim, incumbent Rep. Sam Farr, D-Carmel, focused on his list of "successes" — the progress of converting Fort Ord to CSU-Monterey Bay and keeping the Defense Language Institute and Naval Postgraduate School open.

Farr has two challengers within his own party. First there is Art Dunn, a small business owner, who argued for the preservation of Medicare, Medicaid and Social Security.

Then there was Wigod, a computer engineer, who took on Farr more directly by speaking of "a lack of ideas" in the Democratic establishment. He also argued in favor of limiting capital gains and eliminating inheritance and estate taxes.

On the Republican side, there is Chavez, a businessman who is running an assertive campaign mainly near his Salinas base. Conspicuous by his absence at the forum was Jess Brown, the frontrunner among Republicans challenging Farr.

The third Republican candidate in the congressional race is Barry Norris, a Soquel physician whose comments were focused mainly on health care issues.

John Black is the Natural Law candidate.

■ 15th State Senate District:

Since the current office holder, Henry Mello, D-Watsonville, cannot seek reelection because of term limits, Assemblyman McPherson, R-Santa Cruz, is eager to move into bigger legislative territory.

His top challenger is Rusty Areias, a Democrat who formerly served as 28th District assemblyman and currently sits on the California Coastal Commission.

"Over the past 10 years," Areias declared, "we've built 18 prisons and one college. Our priorities are twisted."

That could have been viewed as an attack on his opponent, McPherson, who supports tough-on-crime bills such as the "three strikes, you're out" legislation.

Hartley and Green Party candidate E. Craig Coffin are also vying for the assembly seat.

■ 27th State Assembly District: With McPherson seeking an expanded turf in the other house of the state legislature, the race is wide open.

The most familiar names are the two Democrats — former Monterey County supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman and current Santa Cruz County supervisor Fred Keeley.

Strasser Kauffman focused on her county record of environmentally friendly land use decisions, protecting legal help for seniors and keeping libraries open.

His opponent, former Monterey County Supervisor Karen Strasser Kaufman, received 23 percent of the vote, with the balance voting no endorsement. A candidate must receive at least 60 percent of the vote in order to receive the Democratic Party endorsement.

■ Friday: Leslie and Ed Stark will host a reception for 5th District supervisorial candidate Jeff Davi from 3 to 4 p.m. Friday at their Carmel residence.

Reservations, directions: 624-4864.

■ Sunday: The public is invited to join Strasser Kaufman for brunch from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Sunday at the Seascape Resort and Conference Center, One Seascape Resort Drive in Aptos. The cost is $45 per person, or $300 for a table of eight.

Reservations and more information: 643-2727.

Keeley's stated areas of concern were big cuts made to programs such as Medicare and "radical Republicans" in important positions in the Assembly.

Strikingly, the two Republican contenders, James Davis and Joan Peros, were the most willing to make strong statements of partisan principle.

"Government is not the be all end all of solving problems," said Davis, a prosecutor in the Monterey County DA's office.

He said his experience fighting criminals means he is ready "to work in the trenches" on behalf of his constituents. "I've done the dirty work," he said.

Peros, making a pitch for personal responsibility, defended her opposition to public funding of abortions and prenatal care, even to low-income women. "Prenatal care is not the responsibility of government," she said.

PINE CONE 'OPINION' SECTION WILL RETURN NEXT WEEK

The two went in last week. According to reports, one carried a small girl, the daughter of the woman who had loaned them the car they drove.

"As soon as they left," Frantz said this week, "I realized that the piece was missing. I'd been distracted by one of them while the other one got the goods."

Would he give up? Not Frantz. He ran outside, spotted their car and jotted down its license number. He reported the theft over "911" and — at Carmel Police Department now — gave officers full descriptions of the men and vehicle.

Weseloh informed

Mark Weseloh owns Old World Antiques and the San Francisco shop where Frantz worked for a year before coming down to Carmel. Weseloh was informed of the theft by his local manager, who decided that the two thieves would try to sell the piece out of town.

"In San Francisco," he said, "we had lots of shoplifters. We had to keep on our toes. We (shop personnel) should create a telephone tree in Carmel. That way, if someone spots a shoplifter, pretty soon the whole area knows. Right then, though, my job was to warn other stores that the pair would be trying to sell stolen goods."

Frantz got out the yellow pages. He dialed, spoke quickly, dialed more. As luck would have it, he called Trotter's Antiques in Pacific Grove just before the two walked in.

Police were summoned on the sly.

Oldham was arrested. The child was taken back to her mother. Reports said Satterfield, however, hit Officer Kathy Hale with a small piece of furniture and ran away.

The suspect put his gas pedal to the floor and led patrol units on a 50-mile chase through Monterey, Marina and Salinas. At times, police said, his auto's speed exceeded 100 miles per hour.

The "highly reckless" Satterfield "drove people off both sides of the road," police added, and ran many stop signs. Finally he was arrested at gunpoint and jailed on charges of grand theft, receiving stolen property, DUI, felony reckless evasion, parole violation and assaulting a police officer.

Police said the California Highway Patrol has taken charge of the case. At this writing, Satterfield was in county jail; arraignment pending.

"It's nice that we got back the stolen piece," Frantz said. "I really didn't think about getting it back; I was simply covering all the bases."

His last words demonstrated something very much like humility: "It worked out all right, didn't it? I handled it the best I knew — and I got lucky."

Hugo and Karen Ferlito signed an agreement to keep their property as open space.

Although Zelus and the Ferlitos will continue to hold title on their 13,500 square-foot lot, they have forfeited development rights via a "conservation easement" agreement hammered out by the land trust, according to Karen Ferlito.

"It's raccoon country now," she said. "No structures will be built on either of the lots."

Ferlito said the property was bought two years ago with the intention of preserving it. She noted, however, that it would not have been spared from development had Probasco gone forward with his plan for a house.

"It is a wonderfully generous thing to (dedicate) this property," said Carmel Mayor Ken White. "And I am elated that the Big Sur Land Trust is able to come in and accomplish something like this."

■ America's Funniest Home Videos — "Family-friendly show appropriate for all ages."

■ Simon — "Devoid of offensive themes. Romantic relationships are strictly innocent thus far."

You can be certain that the latter four are untouched by liberal hands, for all the characters are devoutly conservative gun-owners who favor motherhood, tobacco subsidies and the flat tax! (Only kidding, and trying to stay awake.)

ALL of the above is but a smidgen of the guidance you will receive from this enlightening tome, which can be ordered by calling 800/346-BIAS.

TODAY'S QUOTE ... Floyd Patterson, chairman of the N.Y. State Athletic Commission, on why the state has waited so long to begin testing boxers for the AIDS virus:

"AIDS just came out. I fought for 23 years and there was no AIDS. I just heard of AIDS a few weeks ago."

(Any day now, somebody will tell old Floyd that a man landed on the moon, and he'll say, "Get outta here!")

IF you hadn't noticed, Quonna Lee of Monterey alerts us that we have just left a Year of the Pig, and on Monday we entered a Year of the Rat!

That is, of course, according to the Chinese lunar calendar, which rotates 12 such animal designations for the years as they come and go.

IF you think the designations are meaningless, says Quonna, how do you explain the huge success of such movies as Babe and Gordy during this last year?

"And also," she adds, "do you think it's mere coincidence that a Year of the Rat is an election year?"

WHOA, Quonna, you're creeping into things political, m'dear, and everyone knows this column does not get involved in that field at all.

At any rate, if Quonna has her numbers right, we have just entered the year 4,694! Seriously, did you ever think you'd live so long? Happy New Year!

STORMY WEATHER ... KSBW-TV has canned eight-year veteran weatherman Jim Adamson for reasons neither side will talk about.

But according to Terrible Teri, the astounding detective, the reason had to do with material that turned up in the station's computer system — material having nothing to do with meteorology.

HOWEVER, Robert Rice, he station's recently-appointed general manager, would say only this: "We had differences of opinion and we decided to go on without him. That's all." (In TV, that's called "in-depth reporting.")

Adamson, a multi-talented individual and father of five sons, the oldest being 13, is not certain yet what his next move will be, but indicated it may not be in television.

MEANWHILE, he is helping his wife, Laurel, in her very successful costume business, which works closely with producers of films and TV documentaries in both northern and southern California.

ONWARD ... Monterey's good old Ed Leeper did, indeed, go through with his plan (announced here last week) to publicly read aloud for 20 minutes from the classified ad section of The New York Times!

This historic event, held at Pacific Grove Art Center, attracted some 36 fascinated spectators — but had this column not goofed by printing the wrong address in advance of the event, we estimate the crowd would have been in the neighborhood of 50,000!

THIS column regrets the error, but it wasn't our fault. It was the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am, which gave us bum information on the address!

(No it wasn't, but we learned from the Monterey County Bland that whenever you make a colossal blunder — like fouling up the '96 player pairings, not once but TWICE — never admit it was your fault. Blame the staff at the AT&T Pro-Am headquarters!)

ANYWAY, the reading by good old Ed was part of a Herculean task he has undertaken to read EVERY SINGLE WORD of a Sunday issue (Eastern edition) of The New York Times — all nine pounds, 408 pages!

Don't ask why he's doing it — his reasons are many, including the fact that because it's there, nobody has done it before, and he considers it a form of art. Whatever.

THE POINT is, all 36 spectators gave Ed a whistle-filled standing ovation at the end of his 20-minute stint!

And I'm certain it would have been a thunderous 50,036-person ovation if only the local folks at the AT&T office hadn't led me astray on the address!

ED has completed reading about 85 percent of that Sunday Times in 163 sittings (around 133 hours) so far, and hopes to finish by late May.

But that unconventional, different-drummer mind of his is already planning another project — a garage sale! But with a unique twist, of course.

THAT, however, will be fodder for another day.

Joe Fitzpatrick's column appears weekly in The Pine Cone as well as the new Monterey Times.

BREAKING NEW GROUND

Aquarium's new Outer Bay wing is first of its kind

■ Peninsula staff writer Beth Penney got a sneak preview of the exhibition, and the following are her impressions of the massive exhibition wing.

By BETH PENNEY

ON SATURDAY, March 2, the Monterey Bay Aquarium's new Outer Bay exhibit opens to the public. The exhibit is housed in the Aquarium's $57 million new wing, which nearly doubles the facility's size and gives people a chance to see some animals that have never before been included in an aquarium exhibit.

Visitors entering the new wing ride up an escalator beneath life-sized models of gray whales and Pacific white-sided dolphins. They enter a deep blue space filled with gentle music that genuinely evokes the mood of the ocean.

"We want people to step into another world," said Ken Peterson, the Aquarium's associate manager of public relations. Construction of the new wing took three years and was completed, Peterson said, with the definite goal of "not keeping the feeling of the cannery" that is one of the features of the original building.

The "other world"

The popular circling anchovies have migrated to the new wing, but this group has a larger home: 3,000 of the silvery fish swim around and around in a 15,000-gallon tank above visitors' heads.

Curved walls and low, undulating curving ceilings, combined with unimpeded access to the tanks (the windows are larger and lower, and there are no railings) and strategic lighting effects give visitors the feeling that they are in the sunlit outer bay.

The lighting is designed so that "you get the feel of being in the open sea," Peterson explained.

What he calls the "otherworldly" music was written especially for the Aquarium by local composer John Hewling. Music has been used in specific exhibits before, Peterson said, but this is the first time it has been a permanent feature in a major exhibit.

The overall effect gives the visitor "the illusion of infinity, an endless blue abyss," Peterson said. All of the interior design, he said, was conceived by Aquarium staff.

Animals in the first rooms, which include tanks and hands-on exhibits, are either "swimmers" or "drifters," and they Get ready!

Black Umfolosi, a song and dance troupe from Zimbabwe, comes to Carmel Saturday for a performance at 8 p.m. at Carmel's Sunset Theater, San Carlos at Ninth, Carmel. The latest in this season's Performance Carmel series, the group is known for their 1990 hit album 'Unity.' Tickets are $12.50 and $16, available by calling 624-3996 or by visiting the Sunset Center office between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. weekdays.

include Pacific mackerel and a variety of exquisite jellyfish. Fantasia-like sea nettles move to their own choreography on a 2,100-gallon stage. Microscopic plankton, also "drifters," share the spotlight, so to speak, in tanks that show their tiny masses as well as in exhibits of detailed scale models that would make Steven Spielberg jealous.

"Different slice" of Monterey Bay

"Imagine yourself suspended in the middle of open water," reads the placard outside the enormous Outer Bay tank. "Imagine diving into the waters of the outer bay. You're far from the shore and far above the bottom. There's no seaweed for shelter here, no rocky reefs to rest upon, nothing but the endless blue water around you."

This element of uneasiness in this introduction to the Outer Bay exhibit is not unfounded. As visitors come around one of the curved corners, the ceilings are suddenly higher and one wall has virtually disappeared. In its place is the world's largest fishbowl behind the world's largest window: 78,000 pounds of acrylic that allows visitors a 14.4-foot by 54-foot view into an egg-shaped tank that holds one million gallons of water, more than all of the Aquarium's other exhibits combined.

There are no sunlight-dappled swaying kelp forests in this tank. This is "the deep": dark blue water lit by shafts of simulated sunlight that emulates the light that penetrates the outer bay. The large room is dim. Benches line the walls, and an observation deck allows viewing from another level.

Nothing separates the curious from the enormous window. Children kneel at the corner created by the bottom edge of the acrylic and the carpeted floor and peer into the depths, while yellowfin tuna, barracuda, sunfish, bonitos, and the unusual mola molas — large, round, flat fish —

Beaux Arts Ball fund-raiser brings a bit of Paris to Pacific Grove

By BETH PENNEY

PACIFIC GROVE is known for annual festivals that celebrate its own history: the Good Old Days, the Butterfly Parade, the Feast of Lanterns.

This Saturday night, however, Pacific Grove will leave its Methodist Church Retreat heritage behind as it steps into 1890s Paris, as the town's historic Chautauqua Hall is transformed into the Moulin Rouge for the Friends of the Arts' first Beaux Arts Ball.

The event, which features Dan Koffman (husband of PG Mayor Sandy) as Master of Ceremonies and includes dancing, hors d'oeuvres, a no-host bar, entertainment, a costume contest, an auction and door prizes, starts at 8 p.m. and goes until midnight.

The Beaux Arts Ball is a fund-raiser for the Pacific Grove Arts Commission, which supports projects in P.G. throughout the year that include a children's Artsfest, scholarships for graduating PG High School art students, symphony concerts at the Mayflower Church, free concerts in Jewell Park, and an Artists in the Schools program.

Friends board chairperson Eleanor

Rogge said that the Friends of the Arts came up with the idea of the ball when they "tried to think of a type of fund-raiser that had never been done before."

Beaux Arts balls, Rogge said, were popular in Paris at the turn of the century, and the setting will recreate "the City of Carmel must have world's cleanest sewers

IF CARMEL didn't have its beaches and its funny little shops, its exquisite weather and its superb eateries, and I could live anywhere in the world I wished, I would still pick Carmel.

Even when whiling away the time there is always something to do or see, especially people watching — and I am an ardent people watcher specializing in tourist-people watching.

Last Saturday I sat in front of Carmel's Harrison Memorial Library, waiting for the one o'clock opening. I was watching tourists collect parking tickets. It's a favorite people watching pastime of mine.

Reflections

By Patrick Whitehurst

"It's Saturday, for goodness sakes, ease up. After all, is this a tourist town or what?"

But you tourists must look at it from another point of view: all those tourist ticket bucks make the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea wealthy.

While sitting there and observing, I was attracted to one particular family. Dad was wearing red, white and blue knee-length plaid shorts, white plastic loafers and a white plastic belt.

Blue-kneed Vegas dad

Dad was definitely Vegas. His knees were a rich violet blue. Last Saturday was chilly, but Mr. Vegas had pretty knees and apparently he knew it, so t'ell with the weather. Carmelites were wearing dark trousers, dark shoes and most were wearing a comfy old sweater.

If you are from out of town and need accurate directions to The Hog's Breath or some other distinguished landmark, this is the way to spot a real, honest to goodness native and a dependable guide: A Carmelite is dressed for the temperature, he is comfortable.

Back to our blue-kneed Vegas-type Dad and his family. He approached his car from the driver's side, did a classic, movie-style double take when he saw the stack of tickets neatly pinned to his windshield, read the citations, and went completely bananas . . . Vegas style, I guess.

I was really concerned about a coronary happening right there before my eyes.

I have noticed a strange phenomenon as people collect their parking tickets. Families are brought to the brink of complete dissolution, loving relationships are strained to the breaking point.

Vegas Dad's dance of indignation was a cross between a Hopi rain dance and one of Fred Astaire's old solos where Fred climbs the walls, taps across the mantle, and tips over all the furniture.

Vegas Dad crumpled the tickets, drew back his arm and threw those dumb ol' tickets with all the force of a big-league left fielder trying to reach home plate.

The balled up tickets soared into the air, went about a foot and a half, hit a gust of wind coming up Ocean Avenue and blew back right at his feet.

It had to have been embarrassing for him, what with his family gathered there quaking in wide-eyed terror, watching old Dad turn into a raving maniac.

He looked around sheepishly and bent over to retrieve the notices. His family by this time were whistling and intently studying the flow of traffic, acting as though Dad didn't exist.

Surreptitiously I watched their every move. I could barely contain myself. Mr. Vegas Dad would feed the coffers, and the cute blue-clad Meter Maids (or the handsome Meter Man) could chalk up one more contribution toward having Carmel's sewers cleaned.

I have noticed a strange phenomenon as people collect their parking tickets. Families are brought to the brink of complete dissolution, loving relationships are strained to the breaking point, and the kids, observing it all, think these scenes are the greatest things since blue M&Ms.

Everybody blames everybody else. Mom looks skyward and says, "I told you, Chowderhead, you couldn't park here all day."

Dad snaps back, "You told me to park it, and I parked it!"

And while all this pleasant chit chat is going on the kids disappear up the hill for one more run through The Nature Company or The Game Gallery.

The next scene is Mom and Dad running anxiously uphill trying to find escaped kids. They leave their windshield naked and begging for one more ticket.

Locals not immune

Through all of this I sat there on the stone wall, smug and secure. My car was parked in a "Patrons Only" slot down on Sixth Avenue.

But wait! It had been a while since I parked my car.

Just to make sure, I went to check my windshield.

"Oh, nuts."

Well, it was for a good cause.

Carmel must have the cleanest sewers in the whole world.

That's something to be proud of . . . I think.

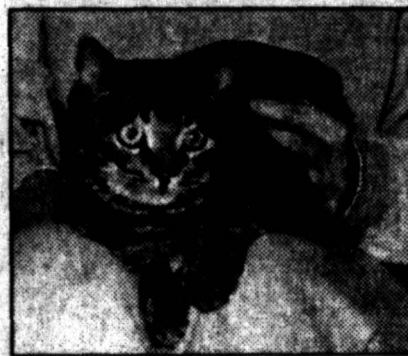

'Reflections,' by Carmel resident Patrick Whitehurst, will appear monthly in Peninsula.

Unicorn's cast, crew make Chekhov one-acts joy to watch

ANTON CHEKHOV (1860-1904), the Russian playwright who was also a licensed physician, is respected as one of the giants of modern drama even though he is remembered for only four major plays.

Those insightful, innovative works, still performed with great success and enjoyed in most parts of the world, are The Seagull (1896), Uncle Vanya (1898), The Three Sisters (1900), and The Cherry Orchard (1903).

But Chekhov was a prolific short story writer as well. In fact, many consider him one of the very best in this genre, along with Guy de Maupassant and O. Henry.

Two of Chekhov's stories in dramatic form, Swan Song and The Boor, comprise the short bill which opened this past weekend, produced by Carey Crockett's Unicorn Theatre Presents and directed by Peter Eberhardt.

In Swan Song, Svedlodikov (Robert Colter), an aging comic actor, wakes up in a darkened theater long after everyone else has gone home. Nursing a towering hangover, he bellows for the stage manager. To no avail.

Misery loves company

Cursing his fate and bemoaning the emptiness of his life, Svedlodikov is soon joined by Nikita (Gary Pullen), the company's long-suffering prompter who has taken to sleeping in the theater dressing room for lack of anywhere else to go.

"My mouth tastes like an army's camped in it," the comic glumly complains. His drowsy companion nods knowingly. (Some of us in the audience nodded knowingly as well.)

"Whoever thinks this theater business is Holy Writ is an ass!" continues the actor. The prompter reaches for an opened bottle of vodka nearby.

But Svedlodikov's mood soon brightens. He relives old triumphs and begins to act out fondly remembered scenes. The hang-over recedes. The weary old body becomes energized. The tired voice grows youthful and resonant once more.

"Where there is genius and art," he thunders joyfully, "there can be no old age." And soon the two old troupers toddle off happily to sleep.

Vintage Chekhov

The clear-eyed insights into the human condition, the gentle humor and endless compassion are all vintage Chekhov, delivered here by Colter, one of our very finest local character actors, and Pullen, his generous, understated foil.

In The Boor, Mrs. Popov (Gabrielle Minor), seven months a widow, is pining woefully for her departed husband, even though we soon learn from her that he was a drunk and constant cheat.

"We're like a pair of weary spiders," complains Buka, the maid (Lisa Estrabrook), who is trying to encourage her mistress to launch herself back into the mainstream of living.

Smirnov (Jody Gilmore), a boorish, brash young stranger, bursts into the house, announces he is owed a sum of money by the dead husband and demands he be paid at once.

The young widow orders him out. He refuses to leave and plops himself down on a chair. "A woman is a freak of nature — like a cat with horns," he snarls in the direction of the frustrated woman.

Male-female magic

A spirited skirmish between the sexes ensues, first savage, then comic, all brilliantly insightful by turns. Chekhov, master observer of human nature and understanding humorist nails the frustrations, contradictions and magic always potentially present in the eternal interplay between men and women. And all to an audience's great delight, of course.

The cast, perhaps here a bit young for their roles, execute the material well. Eberhardt's direction is crisp and lively, and he is ably assisted by Megan Strong.

Set design is by the ubiquitous Mr. Crockett. Other credits include lighting design by Chris Greulich, costume design by Margaret Voss, and the box office is run by Kirsten Schmaltz.

James P. Kinney is a Peninsula resident and freelance theater critic.

Jody Gilmore as Smirnov and Gabrielle Minor as the widow Mrs. Popov get to know one another in Chekhov's 'The Boor' at The Hoffman Playhouse.

UPCOMING EVENT

Popular Run for the Wolves benefit to make comeback

■ 'Ambassador Wolf' Koani will again be on hand

By IVY WESTON

KOANI IS back! Last year's Run for the Wolves benefit for the Wolf Education and Research Center in Ketchum, Idaho has a sequel, Run for the Wolves II, slated for March 10. It will feature a personal appearance by Koani, the "ambassador wolf."

Grey wolf Koani was raised in captivity and her title of "ambassador" means that she is a learning tool, teaching schoolchildren and adults that wolves are not the man-killing beasts they're reputed to be, but that in actuality they never attack humans unless threatened.

Her owners are wildlife biologist Pam Tucker and mythologist Bruce Weide, who travel throughout the nation giving presentations with Koani.

The event, like last year's premiere, includes a concert by blues band Red Beans & Rice and is limited to 200 people. This year a Mexican buffet luncheon will be Event organizer Dana Welch, his Harley and Koani.

Native American art and craft vendors will be on hand throughout the day, selling jewelry, clothing and artifacts, and representatives from Wolf Education and Research Center branches in Ketchum, Idaho and Mazula, Mont. will be present. Celebrity guests are also expected to attend.

A silent auction is also a feature of the event, and among the offerings are contributions from the vendors and from local businesses. Included is a trip for two to Sun Valley, Idaho, including airfare, accommodations in a log cabin and a guided tour by the Wolf Center staff to visit the Sawtooth wolf pack. The pack was featured in the ABC-TV documentary Wolf: Return of a Legend, which also featured Koani.

The prize's value is $3,000. Tickets may be purchased in advance for $10 each by calling 899-5754, and may also be obtained at the event.

Reservations are now being accepted for the event, and until Wednesday, tickets are $45 per person. After that date, they go up to $55. The cost is tax-deductible.

Those who cannot attend but wish to make a donation to the Wolf Center may do so at the Wells Fargo Bank branch on San Carlos Street in Carmel, where an account has been set up under the name "Run for the Wolves." Long-sleeved T-shirts sporting the event name are also available for $18 each.

More information/reservations: 899-5754.

served at the inn's restaurant, Kate's Table, where a "no host" bar is also available.

Attendees from out of town will congregate in San Jose in the north and Atascadero in the south for a Harley-Davidson motorcycle run to Carmel Valley.

"Last year we had people coming in from as far as New York," says event organizer Dana Welch.

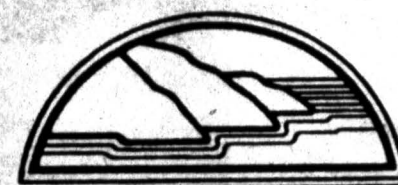

Local residents have a shorter drive to the inn, where things kick off at 11:30 a.m. with opening ceremonies honoring the wolf, led by Sonny Reyna, head of the San Juan American Indian Council. A food offering will be given to the wolf spirit.

"To Native Americans the wolf is perceived as a guardian, messenger and pathfinder for the human spirit," Welch explains. "The wolf is a symbol of nurturing and intelligence."

Jazz Tides

By John Detro

If you've had a tiff with the significant other, make a gesture toward balance via a date on Saturday evening at that Jazz Store right beside KRML Radio in The Crossroads.

On the playbill then and there: Brazilian jazz vocalist Claudia Villela with the Brazilian jazz pianist Weber Drummond. And wherever that music happens, conflicts fade and romance reclaims its proper place in the Great Scheme of Things.

The first set starts at 7:30. As usual, there will be a wine tasting between the two sets. Reservations and details: 624-6432.

Drummond works regularly with the percussionist Helcio Milito. Also a composer of real worth, he's preparing to write his first film score.

As a child in Rio, Claudia would fall asleep nightly to the rhythms of a samba school right behind her home. Later, after doing some record and soundtrack dates, she was a music therapist.

"When you work with people who have neurological or physical disturbance, and you begin to improvise with sounds they can hear in the body, you become a shaman. The spiritual side of music is so important — when I'm singing, I go to the emotion, the power that influences people. I'm looking for real moments of connection."

One shaman met another. Singing with a college group, Villela won a scholarship to study with the great Sheila Jordan at Manhattan School of Music.

Claudia employs a five-octave range, perfect pitch — and that sense of what the shaman can mean for those who have ears.

Tenorman Joshua Redman leads a group at Kuumbwa Jazz Center Monday night.

On Wednesday night, you can hear Peninsula guitarist Joseph Lucido fronting a band. On Thursday, Feb. 29, the same gang will anchor an Acid Jazz Jam Session. No door charge in either case.

Short takes: Blues dudes. Red Beans and Rice will play the Doubletree Hotel's Brasstree Lounge on Saturday night. Games, prizes, KPIG and KAZU deejays in MC roles.

— Percussionist Helcio Milito's group has been inviting guest artists to help him out at The Inn at Spanish Bay's Lobby Lounge. Friday and Saturday nights — Scott and Peggy Brown (keyboards and vocalist, respectively). And Sunday night — Dennis Murphy on electric bass. No cover.

— The Club House on Cannery Row offers The Club House Trio on Sunday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights. James Forkner at the piano, bassist Mickey McPhillips and Mike Shannon at the drums.

The lovely Brazilian singer Claudia Villela joins pianist extraordinaire Weber Drummond for a stellar show Saturday night at that Jazz Store in The Crossroads.

Critics call young Joshua Redman the most impressive tenorman of the past 15 years or so. The son of free-form saxist Dewey Redman, he will lead a group into action on Monday night at Kuumbwa Jazz Center in Santa Cruz.

Shows at 7:30 and 9:30. It's $15 advance (Cymbaline Records) or $17 at the door.

You'll recall that superb jazz professionals like Benny Green, Peter Apfelbaum and Craig Handy came out of Berkeley High. So did Joshua Redman.

Whitey's Place (American Tin Cannery) keeps on importing some of the highly creative Acid Jazz units from the San Francisco Bay Area.

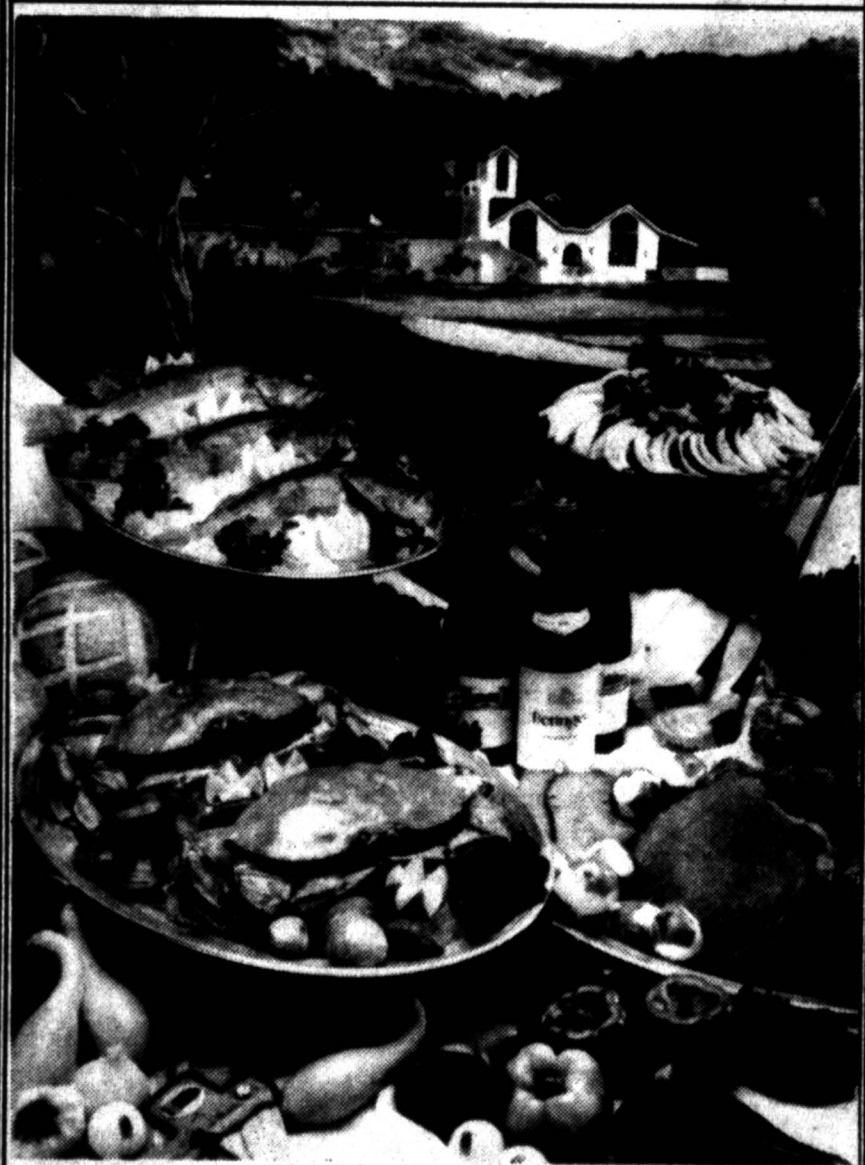

Coming up Friday night is the band called Junk (Jazz + Funk). And Saturday night will bring forth Jungle Biskit. Both shows start at 9 p.m. and both carry a cover charge of $5 per.

Charlie's back!

... and this time, he fronts a quartet. Backing Hunter at his gig at 9 p.m. Saturday, March 2 at Whitey's Place in Pacific Grove are saxists Calder Spanier and Kenny Brooks and drummer Scott Armendola, making up the Charlie Hunter Quartet. Tickets are still available at $12 advance ($14 at the door) by calling 646-8383.

◀ Cultural Council for Monterey County Executive Director David Cloutier, guest speaker Susan Hoffman and president Salvador F. Munoz chat during the granting ceremony luncheon held at The Inn at Spanish Bay.

CCMC committee members Simon Reyes and Amy Funt, with CCMC Vice President George Williams seated next to Supervisor Edith Johnsen, enjoyed the CCMC Granting Ceremony Luncheon.

Benefactors receiving CCMC grants included Milou Ivanovsky, Stephen Moorer, Marcia Hovick and Dr. Vahé Aslanian. The CCMC Granting Ceremony Luncheon was held Monday, Feb. 12.

Cultural Council distributes funds

"USING A chisel, a piece of chalk, a pencil, a dance, a song or a poem, we share our culture," said Salvador F. Munoz, president of the Cultural Council for Monterey County (CCMC).

Social Spotlight

By Dodie Barkley

He spoke those dramatic words as he welcomed the largest gathering ever to the 1996 Granting Ceremony and Luncheon, held Monday at The Inn at Spanish Bay.

Approximately 220 people filled the ballroom to distribute and gather the grants, which are made possible by funds from the Monterey County Board of Supervisors. The supervisors direct the funds in support of cultural development.

Jan Wagstaff, chairperson of the granting committee, remarked that last November, 10 people met to decide how many arts organizations in the community should receive the funds. Forty-one grants were made in four categories: arts institutions, arts organizations, arts programs and projects, and administrative grants to small organizations.

Among the organizations receiving grants were the Henry Miller Library, the Monterey County Historical Society/Longtimers, First Night Monterey, the Camerata Singers, I Cantori di Carmel, Ariel Theatrical, Artists Equity, Forest Theatre Guild and The Center for Photographic Art.

Supervisor Edith Johnsen described the delegating of funds as a "political issue." She mentioned the very positive lobbying done by CCMC Executive Director David Cloutier.

"That's political," she said with a smile. Johnsen told of how very impressed she was upon visiting classrooms to see how previous grants have been put to use.

Guest speaker Susan Hoffman, executive director of the California Confederation of the Arts in Sacramento, spoke of monetary problems besetting the arts, saying that the National Endowment for the Arts might lose up to 40 percent of its budget this year. She strongly advised us to find other ways to fund the arts.

The CCMC acts as a networking organization for the many cultural entities of Monterey County, helping to provide aesthetic and educational experiences for adults and children.

■ Feast at Ghirardelli

Two huge vats stand inside the front window. All they do all day is reduce chocolate bars into syrup. You stand glassy-eyed, watching the chocolate swirling in the vats, wondering what it would be like to walk barefoot through it all. Ah, the decadence!

So what could be more wonderful than a Victorian Valentine Affair sponsored by Ombudsman for Long-term Care held Tuesday, Feb. 13 at the Ghirardelli Chocolate Shop on Cannery Row.

The Ombudsman Group is dedicated to protecting the rights of people living in nursing homes and board and care homes. They investigate and resolve complaints that arise. In 1995, 5,898 hours were spent in resolving problems. They are a very gallant group of people.

Executive director Vicki Bamman told us about the "Ombuddies," a group of schoolchildren, some of whom are considered to be "at risk," who are taken to nursing homes. Each chooses a senior with whom he or she is comfortable, and visits with that senior each week, causing remarkable changes to occur between both partners.

Silent and live auctions raised money for the coffers because more than 100 people bought tickets to the event, which turned out to be a feast!

The foods that co-chairs Helen Plummer and Evelyn Vitarisi had collected as donations were called hors d'oeuvres, but I have never seen hors d'oeuvres like them. Plates of roast beef, ham and turkey were piled a mile high, and huge platters of calamari were served. Fruits and vegetables were displayed in abundance as were all kinds of other delicious offerings. It was like being at a very elegant wedding reception.

For more information about this caring group, call 899-4066.

■ Frank Conte golf tourney winners

"What am I bid for this wine barrel filled with more than 50 bottles of wine?" the auctioneer asked, taunting us to buy, buy, buy during dinner at the Fifth Annual Frank Conte Invitational Golf Tournament, held Friday at the Golf Club at Quail Lodge in Carmel Valley.

The tournament, benefiting the Monterey County Special Olympics, raised tons of money, and the golfers went away with loads of prizes and an overwhelming feeling of worth from being part of such a great cause.

Co-chairmen Frank Conte and his wife Shirleymae, along with Duwane and Carol McCraney, introduced guests from the Special Olympics. Sara Scattini and Mike Leviton had the honor of presenting medallions and trophies to the following flights of winners:

First awards in the third-flight went to Ron Selby, Marc Souza and Jacob Botts. First awards in the second-flight went to Jim, Gary and Pat Caraccioli and their partner Mike Silva. Capturing first in the gold flight were Mike Forbes, Jim Kuinius, Sean O'Malley and Fred Hollenbach.

This year's auctioneers were KCCN-TV 46 newscaster Hunter Finnell and master of ceremonies favorite, Alan Richmond.

■ JUST IN

The Diabetic Youth Foundation (DYF) will hold a brunch, silent auction, live auction and entertainment from 11:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 25 at the Marriott Hotel. Called "Puttin' on the Ritz," it will raise funds for Bearskin Meadow Camp. Diabetic children from the Monterey Bay area attend programs there specifically for them.

At the event, the Bill Hopkins 10-piece band plays after brunch, and there will be live entertainers from San Francisco. The gourmet brunch will be cooked by Sivano Merlo, executive chef at Ferrante's Restaurant in Monterey. Info: the DYF office (510) 937-3393.

■ Setting the record straight

That handsome devil sitting at our table at the Meals on Wheels Red & White Ball was not Joe McCarthy, but our very estimable, widely known Mike McCarthy, whose lovely wife Audrey apprised us of that. Sorry, Mike — 10 lashes with a wet noodle for me.

■ Carmel Residents Association picks Citizen of the Year

The Carmel Residents Association (CRA) held their Eighth annual Citizen of the Year Celebration Sunday at the Boy Scout House in Carmel. The huge fireplace and pine wood interior made me feel as though I was in a Swiss chalet — warm and cozy. As usual, the fun-loving CRA group made it seem even more comfortable.

CRA members love to poke fun at themselves. Howard Skidmore, discussing his ailments, had them rolling in the aisles.

President Linda Anderson welcomed everyone, saying, "You're all citizens of the year." Anderson then asked Skidmore to announce the citizen of the year, which he did. Holding a very long scroll, which he unrolled, he described why Mayor Ken White's wife Jean was chosen.

White's credentials read like something from Who's Who. For 35 years she has been doing something to make the City of Carmel a better place to call home.

Darling Morley Brown, who was one of the nominators, whispered in my ear, "Ron Weitzman nominated Jean," and when Jean came to the podium to receive the award, Brown's eyes were spilling over with tears, as were many others.

Assemblyman Bruce McPherson, Senators Mello and Sam Karas all presented beautiful plaques to White.

Spectacular foods were donated by Bruno's Market, Cherché, The Avenue, Cafe Napoli, La Playa Hotel and others.

As I watched several members go to hug Jean White, I understood why the CRA is such a special group of people. They care about defending Carmel from over-commercialization without stifling its growth.

To join them, write to: CRA, P.O. Box 13, Carmel 93921.

▲ Proudly holding their first awards in the second-flight at the Frank Conte Invitational Tourney are Jim, Gary and Pat Caraccioli and Mike Silva. The event was held Friday, Feb. 9 at the Golf Club at Quail Lodge.

Host Frank Conte and his two auctioneers Alan Richmond and Hunter Finnell gear up to auction off many donated prizes at Conte's Golf Invitational dinner.

◀ CRA member Jean White receives her "Citizen of the Year" plaque from Assemblyman Bruce McPherson Sunday at the Boy Scout House in Carmel.

swim by. The oval construction and the size of the tank make it impossible to tell that you are not peering into the ocean itself.

The invisible barrier that the window creates has been demarcated for its inhabitants by ropes from top to bottom on the inside of the tank.

The ropes are being systematically removed, and the plan is to have them all removed by March 2, but Associate Curator and Aquarist Andy Case said that they will remain until the fish are completely acclimated to the simulated sunlight, which is very carefully monitored to have the least possible effect on their vision. "The risk to the fish is our highest priority," Case said.

The fish in the huge tank are fed each day by four people at the top of the tank. Chopped squid is the diet of choice for most of the fish, Case explained, but the slower-swimming mola molas don't get to the feeding area in time. "We've trained them to come to a target," he said, and then they are hand-fed a paste made of different types of fish.

"Flippers, Flukes, and Fun"

The non-profit, self-supporting Aquarium has been open nearly 12 years, and in that time its staff has found that "people learn in different ways," Peterson said. For this reason, the exhibits in the new wing combine a number of methods of imparting information. Children and adults alike can look through microscopes, listen to volunteers, read placards, watch videos, participate in activity-oriented exhibits or just look at the animals.

The area outside the Outer Bay area holds a playground-like room that is targeted to children from three to seven, featuring animals they can crawl on and learn from at the same time.

An adjoining room holds a series of exhibits that draw the visitor's attention to the fact that Monterey Bay is just a part of the whole, and that what goes on here is connected to the rest of the world.

"The Bay is just one piece of the puzzle," Peterson said. "You need to look at all the oceans."

This exhibit includes the Bay's "travelers," including the migrating whales, and lessons about what people need to do "for the ocean's future." You can send a postcard (postage paid) to a Senator; share what you already do to help take care of the ocean; and find out what else you can do to further the cause.

The stunning Outer Bay exhibit has been opened to members, employees, volunteers, and special guests at various times throughout the month of February. It opens to the public Saturday, March 2.

Admission is $13.75 for adults; $11.75 for students and seniors; $6 for children ages 3-12. The Aquarium is open from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily.

The Aquarium expects increased attendance for the first year that the new wing is open, and they advise purchasing advance tickets, which can be accomplished by calling 1-800-756-3737 from within California. Tickets are also available at all Northern California BASS outlets.

Public information about the Aquarium can be had by calling 648-4888.

Beaux Arts Ball to feature period entertainment, costume contest

celebration of the arts during the Gay Nineties in Paris."

Photographers will be available to take pictures of costumed participants in the atmosphere of the decorated hall, and "street artists" can also be commissioned to do sketches.

"I think it's a very original idea," Rogge said. "We hope to give people a really great artistic experience."

Dancing till midnight will be to the music of the Moonlighters' Band, and hot and cold hors d'oeuvres are included in the admission price. Period entertainment will be provided in the form of a can-can by the DiFranco Dancers.

Attendees are encouraged to come in costume, and a $100 first prize will be awarded for the most original costume, which, Rogge said, contributes to the "concept of creativity" that the evening hopes to engender.

Auction offers all types of art

The evening's auction will offer donated artworks by local artists; some of these works have recently been on display in the windows of the Holman building.

Among the items are paintings and ceramics as well as books signed by the authors, a piece of jade from the extensive collection of Don Wobber, a Tiffany lamp donated by Bud Nunn, and theater tickets.

The auction items, Rogge said, are "representative of visual, literary, and performing arts," all of which the Arts Commission and the Friends of the Arts seek to support.

The nonprofit Friends of the Arts, which has been in existence for approximately two years, is a "needed group" in the community, according to Rogge. The Beaux Arts Ball will be its major fund-raiser this year, and Rogge and the other organizers plan for the ball to become an annual event.

Tickets can be purchased for $30 in advance by calling 373-6698, or at the door for $35. Chatauqua Hall is located at the corner of 16th Street and Central Avenue, across from the Centrella Hotel.

REAL ESTATE

Monterey County, rest of state rejoice about red-hot market

What's this? Agents actually now 'complaining about too few listings' for multitude of buyers

EVERY 10 YEARS since the mid 1970s, the California housing market has gotten red-hot. And if the pace of home sales in December and January continues, the real estate market may follow the same cycle.

California Trends

By Bradley Inman

After a long and persistent slide in home sales, the property market is showing signs of heating up. The number of home sales is increasing, multiple offers are being reported in several areas around the state and home builders are buying up land in anticipation of a strong year.

Home sales in January were up 15.6 percent in the Los Angeles area compared to January last year, according to Dataquick Information Services, Inc. in La Jolla. Bay Area sales climbed 16.6 percent from the same period in 1995.

"We had the best December and January that we have ever had," said Rodger Ricard, president of Cornish & Carey Residential Real Estate in Palo Alto.

Similar to the late 1970s and 1980s, buyers are lining up to buy houses, he said.

In the Silicon Valley, real estate agents are reporting as many as a half-dozen back-up offers on each house as buyers jockey for position to compete for a limited number of homes on the market. According to Dataquick, the two strongest markets in the Bay Area are San Mateo and Santa Clara.

Back from the dead

Realty agents in Monterey County as well as Alameda, Contra Costa and Santa Cruz counties also report strong demand as the housing market comes back to life.

Earlier this month, 300 prospective home buyers showed up for the opening of 14 new homes built by the O'Brien Group in San Ramon. A handful of buyers camped out in the rain the night before.

Even struggling Southern California is experiencing a surge.

"The multiple-offer phenomenon is popping up in established high-end neighborhoods like Malibu, Pasadena, La Jolla and Palos Verdes," said John Karevoll, analyst with Dataquick.

All of sudden, Karevoll said, "agents are complaining about too few listings."

Mortgage Update

Jane Durant-Jones

Refinance - The Inside Story

You undoubtedly have noticed that interest rates on home mortgages have been dropping for several months and currently are near 20 year lows. These rate fluctuations are generally due to changes in the economy - both in the U.S. and abroad. If you purchased your home when interest rate were higher, you may be thinking about re-financing your loan to a lower rate.

As experienced mortgage brokers, we can help you understand the potential benefits of refinancing and can ease you through the process. There are several points to consider. You will have to make application for the new mortgage and have your current income eligibility assessed. Depending upon how long you have had your present loan, a current appraisal of value may be required. You will also want to check to see if there is a prepayment penalty on your current mortgage.

One of the most important factors to consider regarding refinancing is the length of the you plan to remain in your home. Depending on your long range plans, it may not benefit you to refinance - we can help you work through the numbers to make an informed decision.

Realtors shine in community

How MUCH do you know about the real estate agents in this area? Do you have a favorable perception of them?

Perhaps when you read about an agent that has betrayed a trust, you paint them all with the same brush. Maybe you aren't aware that the vast majority of these people quietly go about their work — which is accomplishing the goal of making people's dreams come true — while regularly contributing to the community on a volunteer basis.

Realtor Link

By Jeanette Menter

■ A Shining Example

Debbie Moore, owner of Debbie Moore Real Estate, a 13-year-old company in Salinas, has recently been awarded an Athena Award for her outstanding contributions to community service.

The projects she has directly been involved are too numerous to list, but they include the Christmas Cantree Food Drive, Mothers Against Drunk Drivers, Salinas United Way and United Cerebral Palsy.

Debbie Moore Real Estate became the first business to sign up for the "Adopt A Highway" program in Monterey County. She has served as a director of the Salinas Chamber of Commerce and chaired the Government Affairs Committee in 1994.

Not bad for a single mother and full-time working woman...

■ And There's More

The Monterey County Association of Realtors is growing. Currently there are a total of 810 members, including 42 affiliates. New members are Sharon Daniels with ERA Network, King City; Kristi Pritchard, Contempo Realty; Pamela Dixon-Harvey, Prunedale Properties; Mary Kathryn Myles, Realty World Countywide; Joe Tanzi, Greg Shankle Real Estate; Sandra Arvizu, Pacific Grove Real Estate; and Gillian Ann Kerr, Western Pacific Real Estate.

■ Knowledge is Power

Being an agent means you are constantly upgrading your education. The rules are ever-changing and the complexity of the transactions are increasing.

This means that all agents are required to continue their education process by taking certain courses on a regular basis. One such course is the Graduate Realtors Institute (GRI), which is a prerequisite for other national designations.

Two recent individuals to achieve this important goal are Vera Ambrosio of Coldwell Banker, and Suzanne Burr of Realty World Real Estate Professionals.

Equally impressive, Carol Meadows of Del Monte Realty Co., has been awarded the certified residential specialist designation by the Residential Sales Council of the Realtors National Marketing Institute.

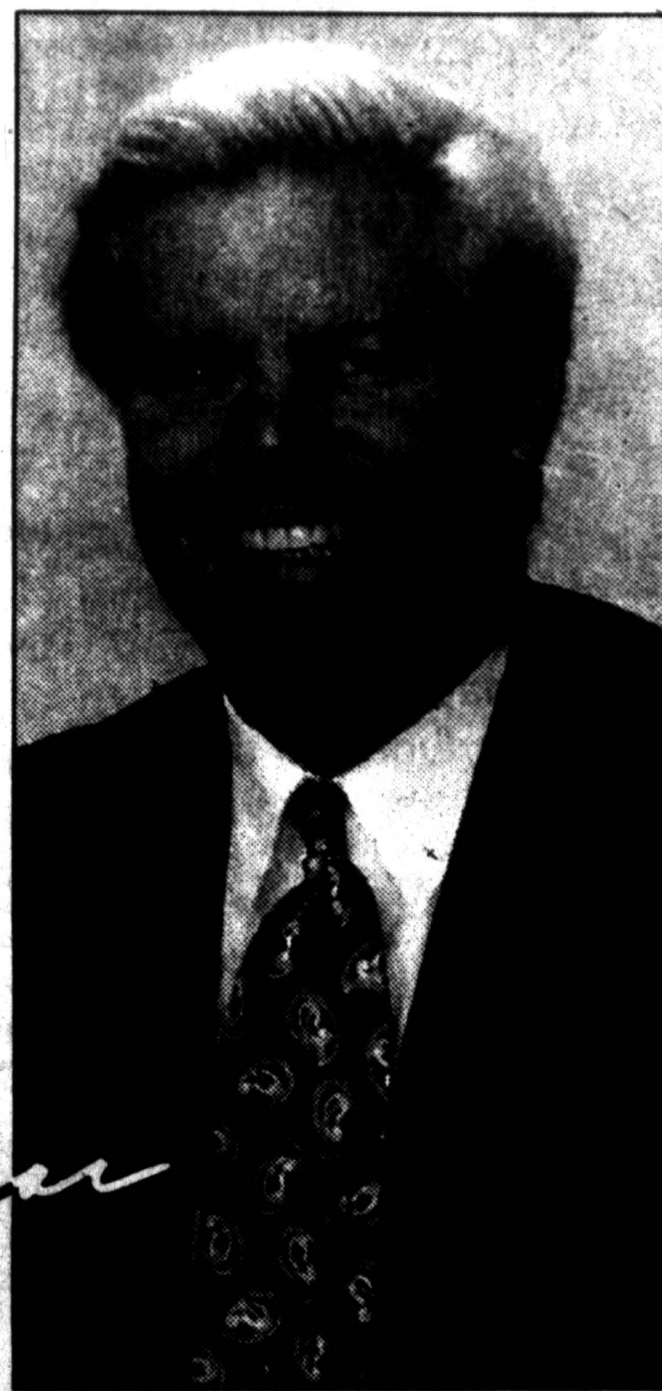

Congratulations!

POETRY CORNER

Untitled

How can a cup be filled, unless it is empty,
empty ...
of the illusion of another!
Dear friend..
when you give your love to another,
you become intoxicated
by your OWN reflection.
Then you will know
the brilliance of your love...

— Emalou Clark,
Carmel

(from her volume May I Have This Waltz?)

Haiku

A silver plane wings
Through the blue distance of sky
My thoughts are in flight.

— Margaret Paroutaud,
Monterey

Recycling

I recycle
Cans and bottles,
Bags, also rags,
Envelopes and Paper.
String and every
Odd thing.
Now growing old
My hands are cold.
And so I pray:
O Lord, in your Mercy,
Recycle me ...

— Margaret Paroutaud

Untitled

only three weeks before rain soft rain to green the waiting hills again to fill the rocky channels till they spill soft mud upon the forest floor again.
and while we are all sleeping in our beds
we will not hear the flowering below of firm round heads that push the yielding duff and blossom armfuls of wild mushrooms!
Chanterelles, Shaggy Manes, Lepiota, Liliceps:
the silent, impossible garden of our winter coast.

— Mara Freeman,
Monterey

Welcome them to stay

Wrinkles, the enemy
of a woman's soul
No matter what you do
the traces still show

Joining rather than fighting
no way we can erase Something in our lives
we have to face

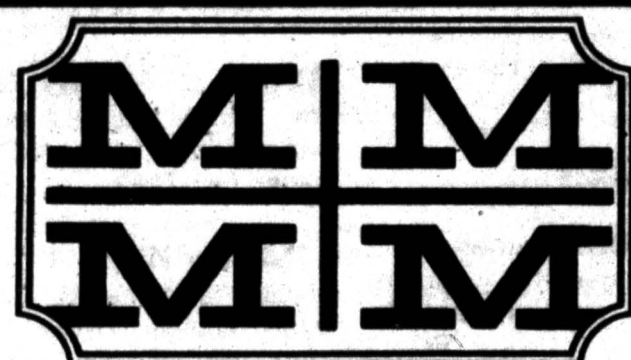

Let them stay, those wrinkles
don't chase them away
With age and experience comes wisdom welcome each new line to stay

— Laura Chang,
Pacific Grove
